

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system which processes claim data related to provision of healthcare to a patient includes the following. An interface processor receives claim data related to a claim for provision of a service to a particular patient. An attachment processor

5 automatically applies predetermined claim submission requirements in processing the claim data to identify: (a) whether an attachment document is required to be submitted together with the claim to a payer for claim reimbursement; and (b) which particular document is to be provided together with the claim to said payer for claim reimbursement. A document processor retrieves the particular document from storage 10 for provision to said payer for claim reimbursement.